

When I heard that the National Association of Broadcasters was seeking protection from the FCC regarding satellite radio providing weather and traffic reports I thought it must be a joke. But now I learn that it isn't a joke after all and they really are trying to have the federal government intervene. Outragous! Rather than attack satellite radio maybe they should try to improve their product and make it more attractive to listeners. If broadcast radio was more palatable maybe I wouldn't have had the need to subscribe to XM Radio. I pay for my radio entertainment. Quite frankly, I don't see that it's any of the federal government's business where I get my weather and traffic information.
